Information on the litigation with former employees of the Givet site

Following the announcement of the closure of the Givet site in 2008, 55 employees had taken legal action in individual proceedings to gain the above legal compensation in addition to that already paid.

On 16 May 2011, the Charleville-Mézières employee claims court ordered Gascogne Laminates to pay the former employees indemnities and wages for a total of €0.9m with a request for provisional execution. The company summarily obtained suspension of the provisional execution and appealed this judgement on the merits of the case.

The court has rendered its judgement following the hearing held on 9 September 2013, sentencing Gascogne Laminates to pay increased damages and interest to the former employees and to reimburse a portion of the benefits paid by Assédic (French agency responsible for paying unemployment benefits). The total cost of this litigation is estimated at €1.3m. The Group specifies that a provision has been set aside in the accounts for the amount stipulated in the initial sentence, i.e. €0.9m.

Gascogne reserves the right to file an appeal.
